

HENRY S. IVES IN COURT.

HEARING OF THIS CELEBRATED RAIL-ROAD CASE.

What the Napoleon of Wall Street is charged with by the President of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad—The Judge Reserves Decision.

New York, Dec. 16.—Henry S. Ives appeared at the Tombs police court to-day with an array of prominent counsel to answer the charge of President Dexter, of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad. The interests of the latter were looked after by Lawyer Cass.

The proceedings opened with the reading of the complaint on which the warrant for the arrest of Ives was granted. The complaint charges Ives with having appropriated to his own use the proceeds of a sight draft for $100,000, drawn June 3, 1887, by the First National bank of Cincinnati on the Western National bank of this city. Mr. Dexter charges that the draft was in part payment of $250,000 by the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton for 5,000 shares of Terre Haute, Vandalia & Minneapolis railroad, and should have been handed to A. R. McKee, president of the corporation. It was also charged that instead of doing this Ives had it deposited with the American Exchange bank to the individual credit of H. S. Ives & Company, and that it was afterwards paid by the Western National bank. President Dexter, the complainant, was the first witness called.

Hardly had Mr. Dexter begun his testimony when a deluge of objections were interposed by Mr. Ives' lawyers. After a long wrangle, Mr. Johnson on the part of Ives, said: "We admit the receipt of this money by Henry S. Ives, trustee, and that it was deposited to his credit in the bank. We court investigation so far as this case is concerned. We will even admit that the money was never passed into the credit of the general account of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton company. We will show, however, that Mr. Ives legally held this money as trustee and vice president of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railway, and that it was properly passed to the credit of Henry S. Ives, trustee, on the books."

A call for the books of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton was made by one of Mr. Ives' lawyers. Mr. Cass, for the plaintiff, retorted that all the books of the company would be forthcoming if Mr. Ives would produce the others. Mr. Dexter said he was not satisfied with the admissions made by Mr. Ives. He wanted them broader. Piles of books were brought in and another legal wrangle ensued. Judge Kilbreth cautioned the lawyers that they were straying away from the case. Mr. Cass for President Dexter then said: "Your honor, we claim that not one cent of this $100,000 was ever paid over by Mr. Ives to the company's credit. We claim that the $100,000 was an over-payment by Mr. Dexter. He paid $100,000 more than he intended to pay."

Mr. Dexter and his attorney struggled for a long time to get in some testimony but the objections were too numerous, and finally Mr. Johnson, of Ives' counsel, took witness in hand. He severely cross-examined Mr. Dexter. The latter admitted that he was not an officer or even a stockholder of the company at that time and only knew of the matter of the draft from the books and files of the company. He also admitted that he had commenced this criminal proceeding without authority from the directors of the road and that he had secured Mr. Cass as the attorney because Mr. Ives had other criminal matters of his own against Mr. Ives. The witness acknowledged that he had threatened criminal proceedings against Ives some time ago. Ives interfered in the matter of the loan of Irving A. Ewan, of Boston, although it was a private business transaction of Mr. Ives and Ives had threatened to enjoin the witness from purchasing the securities in that loan.

After further testimony Judge Kilbreth took the papers and reserved his decision.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

A Keg of Powder Mysteriously Explodes in a Boy's Arms.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 16.—Workmen under Springmeier & Company, the contractors, have been engaged in blasting the roadway at the intersection of Clifton avenue and Riddle road, Coryville. The men had finished preparing a blast about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and one of the hands, Victor Simes, sixteen years old, was given the keg of powder to take to a small frame shed near by, in which are kept the tools and material. Simes took the uncovered keg in his arms and started off. In a few seconds there was a loud report.

The workmen looked in the direction and saw a cloud of smoke rising. Simes was lying on the ground, where he had been violently thrown. They ran to his assistance, and found the boy had been fearfully burned about the face, arms and chest. He was taken to his home, corner of Clifton avenue and Calhoun street. The physician who was called pronounced Simes' injuries very serious, and possibly would result fatally.

There is considerable mystery as to the cause of the explosion. Some of the workmen are of the opinion that Simes was smoking a pipe at the time, and the ashes dropped into the uncovered keg, exploding the coarse blasting powder. The keg had been recently opened, and was nearly full. It is a miracle that the boy was not blown to pieces. Simes denies that he was smoking at the time, nor can he give any explanation of the explosion. The report was heard for some distance around and created great excitement.

Mayor Smith eloquently welcomed the "Strangers Within Our Gates." Other toasts and responses were: "Our Exposition," responded to by President Allison; "Ohio Valley Possibilities," by John C. Covart, Cleveland Leader; "Our Guests," by Lieutenant Governor Bryan, of Kentucky; "Lovely Women," by Governor Buckner, Governor Wilson, of West Virginia; J. G. Shanklin, of Evansville, Col. Parker, of Iowa; O. A. Snedeker, of Illinois, and Judge Burton, of Missouri, all made clever little speeches.
